A GUIDE TO
FIRST FRIDAY
MAY 2018

HOW TO BE COOL...

AT FIRST FRIDAY

Is it your first First Friday? With these helpful hints, you'll be a First Friday pro in no time.

- ◆ Don't touch the art, and definitely don't steal the art. Most art is available for purchase so that you can touch it whenever you please... from the comfort of your own home.
- ◆ Don't go just for the booze. It's all about the art, man. If you do partake in a light snack or beverage, stay on the lookout for the tip jar!
- ◆ Be aware of your surroundings. Pay attention when in doorways and crowded halls, as those tend to be the worst place to abruptly stop and catch up with your buddy.

It's pretty simple. Just be a good person and enjoy the art!

"Episodic Threads" aims to stitch together the past and future by using fabric, thread, oil paint, and other water-based media. Ed Rumbaugh, Patrick Studebaker, and Shea Wilson will open this show at May's First Friday at Tugboat Gallery. Studebaker works in a combination of traditional style oil paint and oil-based enamel, which creates physical distance to the surface and allows for free association. Rumbaugh uses little planning in creating his art. He uses basic colors and commercially-printed cotton fabric with water-based mixed media. Wilkinson stitches fiber works to show a future in which biology and technology are impossible to separate from the rest of the world. The show will be open from 7 PM - 10 PM, and it will officially close on May 26.
